

Trade deals should be backed by calculations: Jaishankar

Says moving out of the RCEP was in the interest of India's business

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, 7 March

No country in the world says everybody is welcome, External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar said on Saturday, hitting out at those criticising India over the Citizenship (Amendment) Act.

Jaishankar flayed the United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC) for its criticism on the situation in Jammu and Kashmir, saying its director had been wrong earlier too and one should look at the UN body's past record on handling the Kashmir issue.

"We have tried to reduce the number of stateless people through this legislation. That should be appreciated," he said when asked about the CAA at the ET Global Business Summit. "We have done it in a way that we do not create a bigger problem for ourselves." "Everybody when they look at citizenship has a context and has a criterion. Show me a country in the world which says everybody in the world is welcome. Nobody does that. Look at America. Look at the Europeans. I can give you example of every European country. There is some social criterion," he noted.

The external affairs minister said moving out of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) was in the interest of India's business.

Asked about the UNHRC director not agreeing with India on the Kashmir issue, Jaishankar said, "UNHRC director has been wrong before. How carefully they (UNHRC) skirt around the cross-border terrorism problem, as if it has nothing to do with country next door. Please understand where they are coming from; look at UNHRC's record how they handled the issue earlier." Asked if India was losing its friends, Jaishankar said, "Maybe we are getting to know who our friends really are." He said it is a kind of geo-political assessment as there was a time when India was very defensive, its capabilities were less, threats were more and risks were higher.

"We adopted a policy of managing the world but kind of staying away. We can't do that any more. We are the 5th largest economy of the world and will be the third largest. We have to engage everybody and find solutions," he said.

"In a sense you would have geopolitical constituency out there in the world. There will be people who understand the changes of India, who agree with it, there are people who may not agree with it. I would not mix the two. I would not mix apples and oranges. I think these are two different processes at work. But, I will come out ahead at the end of it," the minister said.

On opposition to the CAA and whether India has not been able to convince the world enough, he said, "There are sections of the world outside of the media." He noted that he has engaged with governments and cited the example when in Brussels, he had 27 foreign ministers in a room to whom he was talking.

"The point we make on CAA is that it cannot be anybody's case that a government or Parliament doesn't have the right to set the terms of naturalisation or citizenship. Every government does that, every parliament does that. What we have tried to do is we have a large number of stateless people. We have tried to reduce the large number of stateless people we have in this country through this legislation. That should be appreciated. We have done it in a way that we do not create a bigger problem for ourselves. Everybody when they look at citizenship have a context and has a criterion," he said.

"We can't let governance challenges go unaddressed. It's not the mindset of this government to just let important issues pass without decisively addressing them, which should have been addressed earlier. When you address that you disturb the status quo," he said.

The minister added that some people had proclaimed themselves arbiters of public policy, and they might get ruffled. "Obviously there will be public debates and those debates are legitimate and are happening in India as well as outside," the minister noted.

The external affairs minister said technology has always been the driver of global politics and never more so than now.

"Its promise, especially of a society for India with a natural interest in leapfrogging, is enormous. We are seeing that unfold most of all in the digital domain. "As we all know, this has created its own issues of data protection and data security. But from the vantage point of foreign policy, there are some aspects that need greater deliberation as a national approach," he said.

"In a world that is more narrowly economic, trade negotiations have acquired a higher profile in international affairs. Much of that arises from the behaviour of America, the strategy of China, the approach of Japan and the focus of Europe. As a nation that is still to integrate itself into global supply chains, develop its infrastructure and scale up its capabilities, these are not easy times," Jaishankar said, adding that obviously in a globalised world, no economy could be an island unto itself.

"But the exercise of engagement — and its terms — must be very objectively assessed. Trade outcomes must be primarily justified by trade calculations, not by political correctness. Their gains must be visible, probable and practical; not just hypothetical scenarios," he said.

"The rise of India is underway. And it is based, amongst others, on the rise of Indian businesses. Many of them operate abroad and as per global norms, expect the support of their government. They are entitled to it and our obligation is to provide it. Their quest to expand market share and penetrate new markets is entirely understandable. Here too, they deserve full backing and I can assure you, will get it," he added.

Indigenous defence production key to $5-trn economy: Rajnath

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, 7 March

The government has set a target of $26 billion turnover in aerospace and military manufacturing in next five years, Defence Minister Rajnath Singh said, noting that indigenous defence production was key to achieving the country's aim to be a $5 trillion economy by 2024.

He said adequate thrust is being given on enhancing defence exports through the primary aim of indigenous defence production is to cater to the needs of the armed forces.

In an address at the ET Global Business Summit, urged the private sector to increase its participation in defence manufacturing to realise the government's vision of making India a $5 trillion economy by 2024.

Last year, Prime Minister Narendra Modi set an ambitious target of making India's economy a $5 trillion one by 2024. The current size of the Indian economy is around $2.8 trillion.

In his address, Singh said the manufacturing sector has the potential to reach $1 trillion by 2025 and that the government is striving to achieve the goal by implementing key flagship programmes like 'Make in India'.

"In our envisaged Defence

Production Policy, we have clearly spelt out our goal to achieve a turnover of $26 billion in aerospace and defence goods and services by 2025. This will have huge implications for India's endeavours to promote R&D, innovation and its efforts to secure a place in global supply chains," he said.

BJP questions CM Uddhav's silence on Muslim quota

The BJP on Saturday hit out at Maharashtra Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray over his claim that his party, the Shiv Sena, had walked away from the NDA but not from the ideology of Hindutva.

Visiting Ayodhya for the first time after he became chief minister, Thackeray said earlier in the day that he might have parted ways with the BJP (but) not with Hindutva, and "BJP and Hindutva are different". The BJP asked why he and his party were silent on certain issues such as comments of Congress leaders berating Vinayak Damodar Savarkar.
